Create A Touch-Free Environment

Though no one likes to think about it, we encounter potentially infected surfaces every day. Door handles, faucets, toilets, light switches and other high-touch surfaces can spread viruses from one person to another. Creating touch-free environments in your public spaces can help reduce the spread of germs.

High-Touch Areas

- Entranceways
- Common Areas
- Restrooms
- Breakrooms

Why Switch to Sensor?

Sensor faucets eliminate a touch point for potential contamination. According to the CDC*:

- Washing your hands can help keep you healthy and minimize the spread of respiratory and diarrheal infections. Some of the ways germs can spread:
 - Touch your eyes, nose and mouth with unwashed hands
 - Prepare and/or consume food and/or drinks with unwashed hands
 - Touch contaminated surfaces and/or objects
 - Blow your nose, cough or sneeze into your hands before touching others' hands or common objects

Sensor faucets save water when compared to standard manual bathroom faucets.

- Flow rates of sensor faucets (0.5 GPM to 0.35 GPM) are lower when compared to flow rates of standard manual lavatory faucets (1.2 GPM)
- Minimize risk of wasted water due to a user turning on a faucet and forgetting to turn it off

Sensor faucets elevate the overall look of a restroom.

- The absence of handles and buttons creates a streamlined look and minimizes standing water on the faucet deck
- Design options range from transitional to ultra-modern to fit any space
